

List of websites I used in my research:

1. <http://www.independentmusic.com.au/lessons.php>
This school of music talks about their prices and what instruments they teach both of which I included in my lesson information page draft. They also talk about how many 'blocks' of lessons people can book, I thought this would be important to include in our music school as well.
2. <http://fortemusic.com.au/about-us/>
This website mostly talked about the value their school can offer to a potential student with a big focus on how music can help children grow and develop. I didn't find this information that important and as a result didn't include it in my lesson info page, I did however use it as inspiration for the first couple sentences at the start of the lesson info page.
3. <http://www.creativemusic.com.au/shopcontent.asp?type=Parents>
This music school website talked about their teachers and how their teachers can help you on your musical journey. I incorporated a small paragraph regarding the teachers that teach at our music school. Again, like the previous website this music school also talked about how musical lessons can help brighten a child.
